PLANS COMPLETED FOR N.R.A. PARADE

The local N. R. A. committee met in the Council chambers in the City Hall, Tuesday, October 31, at 8 P. M., with Mr. Paul Selmi presiding.

A report was made on the progress of the parade committee by Mr. Johnston, after which the rest of the evening was spent in discussing the plans.

The people of Daly City, Colma, and Lawndale are expected to get behind the parade program. Do your part. If you desire to enter the parade, it is not too late to get in touch with Mr. LeRoy Johnson, 140 Los Banos avenue, Daly City. And remember, this is going to be a parade to be remembered for years to come, as this district's answer to President Roosevelt's call for co-operation in our fight, and his fight, against the great forces which have driven us to despair. Co-operate and live; agitate and be annihilated.

Here is the lineup on the parade. The parade will form at the county line, march south on Mission street to Colma, and return to the Jefferson high school, where N. R. A. speakers will be heard. The public is urged to hear these speakers, and everyone is invited to the high school auditorium after the parade.

First Division—City officials, N. R. A. officials, Boy Scouts, Redmen Mixed Drum Corps.

Second Division—Daly City Fire Department, Daly City Eagles Band, Daly City Veteran Firemen, Daly City Merchants' Association.

Third Division—American Legion, P. T. A. and school children.

Fourth Division—Fraternal Order of Eagles, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Moose drill team.

Fifth Division—Druids, Native Sons, Native Daughters, Italian-American Club.

Sixth Division—Daly City Water Department, Commercial floats.

Divisions No. 1 and No. 2 will form on Lieber street along the north curb line with No. 1 division nearest Mission. No. 3 division will also form on Lieber street, but on the line of the south curb line.

On Rice street, Divisions No. 4 and 5 form along the north curb line with Division No. 4 nearest Mission. No. 6 division will form along the south curb line of Rice street.

No cars or trucks will be allowed in this parade unless they are decorated, or have some sign on them to show that they should have a place in the parade.

Don't forget the parade starts at 8 P. M. If you do not see the parade, or do not take part in it, you will have missed something.

There is going to be some surprises that are going to open the eyes of the people of this community. Don't fail to be there and be surprised with the rest.

CITY MERCHANTS INSTALL OFFICERS

There was another enthusiastic meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association held last Wednesday evening at the City Hall Anditorium, the occasion being the retirement from office of President Andrew Vireno and Financial Secretary John J. Fahey, and the installation of the newly elected men to take their places.

After making final arrangements for the coming N. R. A. parade to be held November 7 at 8 P. M. and disposing of several minor matters, the election and installation of officers to serve for the coming year was in order, and Mayor H. H. Smith, acting as installing officer, proceeded to install the new officers in a very able manner and to extend congratulations to the retiring men for the good work they had done.

Councilman John J. Fahey has served the association for several years, first as president and then as financial secretary-treasurer, and was highly commended for the interest he has taken and his efforts to make the organization a success.

Andrew Vireno has been president for the last four years and the mayor, in well chosen remarks, expressed to him the thanks of the members, of the Daly City officials and of the public for the great work he has done for the association and for the welfare of the community. A committee was appointed to procure a suitable token to be presented to him at the next regular meeting.

The newly elected officers who were installed are: President R. T. McHale, Vice-President Fred Mather, Recording Secretary W. H. Clay, Financial Secretary-Treasurer Charles Williamson.

LOCAL VETS WILL INSTALL OFFICERS

The members of Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held their usual semi-monthly meeting on Friday night, October 27, in the Masonic Hall, with Senior Vice-Commander Allen presiding. Commander Johnston thought it wise to give the newly elected officers a taste of what is in the offing for them, and the oficers' chairs of the Post were filled by the officers elect.

Plans are well formulated for a joint installation with the Ladies' Auxiliary, to install the officers of both organizations, on Friday night, November 10. The members of the Auxiliary are making the necessary plans to assure a perfect evening, and the members of the Post will do their part to make it one of the most impressive meetings of the year.

The degree team of the Post made its premier appearance at the meeting, putting on the work for the new recruit, and with their swanky marine white, black trimmings, black Sam Browns, and garrison caps, they made a most striking appearance. Their second appearance in uniform is billed for the big N. R. A. parade to be held on Tuesday night, November 7. The plans for the partcipation of the Post are now well formulated, and it will be the greatest turnout of members to ever have appeared in out city. Every member of the Post is enthused, and such enthusiasm has but one interpretation, success.

The plans for the National Defense Rally, the zero hour of which is Saturday, November 11, are being worked out carefully to get the most of every effort expended. It is hoped that the membership of this Post will have nearly doubled by the time the rally is over.

The San Mateo-Santa Clara Counties Council will hold their next monthly meeting at Miller's Tavern, on next Sunday night, November 4. At these meetings many items of importance to the veterans is discussed, and plans laid to get the most out of our work.

The next regular monthly dance to be held by the Post will be on Saturday night, November 18, and these dances, under the supervision of Comrade Fred Collins, are gaining in popularity regularly, and it will be only a short time until the hall will be too small to take care of the dancers, and those out for a good time.

Auxiliary Notes of Interest

The members of the Auxiliary to the Post met on Friday night, November 27, and one of the important items was the regular inspection by County Inspector Mrs. Ivey Neeley, who made a very excellent report, and reported that this is one Auxiliary that is up and coming.

During the week many members of the Auxiliary will be visitors at installations held by Matlan Auxiliary at San Mateo, and at Ralph T. Zane Auxiliary, San Jose, where Department Commander Neron, accompanied by Mrs. Neron, will install the officers of that Post.

FRED R. LINSER, Adjutant.

MAN MEETS DEATH IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Walter Blackwell, Stanyan street, San Francisco, accompanied by L. Norman, of Irvington street, and E. Roy Thompson, of Los Olivos avenue, were returning from a Hallowe'en party in Belmont late Tuesday evening when an accident occurred on the Bayshore highway, near Burlingame.

A passing motorist took L. Norman to the Mills Memorial hospital.

Burlingame police notified the Daly City department that Blackwell's machine had been found overturned in the marsh near Burlingame and that Blackwell was dead, that Norman was in the hospital, and for the chief of police here to locate Thompson and conduct an investigation..

Chief of Police John T. Doyle went to the Thompson home and found Thompson with a severely lacerated face. He took him to the Villa Sanitarium for treatment. Thompson told the chief that an unknown woman had brought him home.

JUNIOR AUXILIARY SPONSORS PARTY

The Juniors of Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, gave a masquerade party on Monday evening, October 30. The mummy, Red Devil, Spanish ladies, Gypsies, clowns, Amos 'n Andy, the ghosts and many other famous characters were present to enjoy themselves and partcipiate in the fun. Many games were played, and refreshments were served in true Hallowe'en style. A number of mothers were present. Mrs. Catherine Foreman is chairman of the Juniors.

AMERICAN LEGION SEEKING MEMBERS

O. C. Cornell, Commander of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, which is now conducting a membership campaign, today made the following statement concerning the appeal of the Legion to World war veterans:

"Is there any veteran of the World war so poor in spirit and patriotism that he is not proud of the part he played in the greatest of all military struggles since history began?

"Have not we veterans a justified pride in our service? If any man were to assert that we had not played our part as men and Americans, how quickly would we resent it.

"The American Legion offers the best opportunity for you to testify to the world of your loyalty and service during the war. The lapel button of the Legion is a notice to all that you failed not when your country called, and that you still subscribe to the patriotism and Americanism for which the Legion stands.

"Without the Legion button, the ex-service man has no method of differentiating himself from the thousands who did not go. He may have served, but no one will know it. And the world finds it easy and convenient to forget.

"With the Legion button you quietly but effectively identify yourself as one of America's veterans, and as an active participant in the work of a patriotic society which is dedicated to the preservation of American principles.

"Be proud that you can join the American Legion. Those who did serve, but who have not up to now come into the Legion, are sending in their applications by the thousands. They are proud they answered the call. They want the world to know it.

"The Legion's great days are ahead. Its principles and its service commend it to all. Daly City Post No. 410 invites you to comradeship. Be one of the active Legionnaires of our community."

There will be a special membership meeting in Legion Hall tonight, Friday, November 3, at 7 o'clock. Everybody turn out for this meeting. Remember, a national citation if we make our 1934 quota by November 11. Let's put Daly City Post No. 410 in the 100 per cent class again this year.

The San Mateo County Council will meet in Metropolitan Hall, South San Francisco, tonight.

The American Legion memorial window in the National Cemetery Chapel at the Presidio will be dedicated Sunday, November 5, at 10:30 A. M. Past Department Commander Warren Atherton will be one of the speakers.

The American Legion Armistice memorial service will be held in the San Francisco War Memorial, in the main auditorium, Sunday, November 5, at 2:30 P. M.

Comrade L. M. Hill has been appointed district publicity chairman for San Mateo county.

Don't forget the next regular meeting, Wednesday, November 8. Comrade Miller, social chairman, has something special to offer in entertainment and refreshments.

General Pershing P. T. A. to Meet

The members of the General Pershing P. T. A. will hold their monthly meeting in the P. T. A. room in the school on Tuesday, November 7. Mrs. Julia Byrne will be the nurse in charge of the children during the meeting.

CROWDS WELCOME SEASON OF RACING

Two stakes this week end will be offered at Tanforan and the huge crowds which welcomed the start of the Fall meeting, November 1, probably will be eclipsed Saturday and Sunday. The forty-day session introduces the pari-mutuel method of wagering in California for the first time on a major racetrack.

Charity will be aided Sunday, November 5, when the Community Chest Handicap will be run. The entire gate receipts will be given to the Community Chest, and the racing officials will donate their salaries for the day.

The handicap, over the short six furlongs of the A. B. Spreckels course, will bring into action some of the fastest sprinters in the West. The feature carries an added money value of $2,000.

Two-year-old stars will race Saturday, November 4, in the Juvenile stakes, also over the Spreckels course, with $2,000 added. Interest, to an extent, will be based upon the clashing of many of the West's best youngsters against speedy Eastern juveniles.

Judge Christopher J. Fitzgerald, new director of racing and recognized as one of racing's outstanding officials, was being congratulated for the smooth functioning of the new racing department.

Public and horsemen alike welcomed the introduction of the horse receiving barn, which safeguards thoroughbreds from being tampered with and helps stamp out the use of narcotics. This is the first time that this feature was ever used on a race track on this continent.

Another feature which met with the approval of the fans was the posting of the pari-mutuel calculating sheets, showing in detail how the mutuel prices are figured.

Henry Potter Russell, chairman of the new advisory board, and Ralph C. MacArthur, general manager of the track, expressed pleasure at the fine manner in which the resumption of the sport was received.

LOCAL CATHOLIC DAUGHTERS ADD NEW MEMBERS TO COURT

Eagles' Hall was the scene of a very pleasant gathering last Sunday afternoon, when Court St. Mary No. 1155, Catholic Daughters of America, received into the order a class of candidates. The ritualistic work was exemplified by the officers of the Court, with the Grand Regent, Mrs. Margaret A. Fields, presiding.

A large group, from the various Courts in San Francisco, were present to witness this ceremony, as well as many of the Grand officers and representatives of the State Court. A delightful afternoon was spent and at the close of the session delicious refreshments were served.

Interesting talks were given by the Supervising District Deputy Mrs. Anita K. Mayer, of Court Golden Gate, District Deputy Irma Day Vizzard, of Court West of Twin Peaks, Grand Regent Mrs. Catherine Poquette, of Court Salesian, and Mrs. Dolores Denachaud, of Court St. Francis.

Mrs. Christine Michelsen and her able assistants had charge of the refreshments, and the decorations were under the supervision of Mrs. Angela Johnson. The musical program, under the direction of Mrs. Julia Jonston, organist of Court St. Mary, was particularly good. Vocal selections were delightfully rendered by Mrs. Loretta Johnston.

BENEFITS GALORE FOR GOLD MINER

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Glowing reports of increased activity in the gold mining industry all along the Pacific Coast and adjacent territory are piling up. The impetus to the tremendously important task of supplying the country with more of the precious metal comes as a direct consequence of the taking over by the Federal Government of the fixing of the price of gold, and a steadily mounting price it is, too. No possible conmbination of circumstances could be imagined that would be better for the deserving delvers for the earth's treasures.

Everything is of a roseate hue for the miners and we fail to see one cloud on his horizon. Co-operation was the keynote at the recent meeting of gold producers from far and near for the formation of a national association, and with that inspiring notion as a slogan we cannot go wrong in the great work of the rehabilitation of the economic structure, which had gone so sadly awry in recent years.

I was especially struck by remarks made by Congressman Harry L. Englebright, a valiant battler at all times for the good of mining, at the organization session of the producers and operators. That up-and-coming statesman emphasized the need of a united front at Washington in the interest of the gold mining industry. Here is an excerpt from the national legislator's speech we should cogitate deeply:

"There has long been a noticeable spirit of indifference in the mining industry. Numerous bills have cropped up in Congress, which, if passed, would have hurt the industry. But operators and producers do not bother about them. Mining men now realize that they are an important factor in the economic recovery of the country by promoting gold mining."

Mining men are looking for early stabilization. One prominent producer expressed the situation graphically by saying the industry has been wandering in circles in consequence of the continuous fluctuation of the price of gold. It is the consensus of opinion among experts that the action of President Roosevelt will permit miners to plan for the future with some degree of certainty. The chief executive of the nation, it will be recalled, not only took over price fixing but promised stabilization.

A word picture of the present tendency of the unemployed to go into the mountains and foothills with pan and rocker is given in The New Yorker, which looks at everything from a witty slant. One of the paragraphers of the well known weekly publication says:

"We came upon a curious fact this week—most of the pans with which the two hundred thousand unemployed men have been panning gold in the Far West are made right here in New York, or anyhow, in Woodhaven, Long Island, by the Lalance & Grosjean Manufacturing Company. The L. & G. Company has experienced quite a boom in the past few years because of orders for pans, many telegraphic, from the Pacific Coast and Colorado. Business is four times what it was before unemployment, and this year so far they've sold something like forty thousand pans.

"The firm makes about eighty per cent of all the pans made, as it has for the past eighty years. The L. & G. Company was founded innocently in 1849 to make kitchenware—and you know what happened that year. They started to make gold pans and have been turning them out ever since.

"The pans are made of steel, and are of a model that hasn't been changed since the business started. They come in two sizes, three and a half inches deep and sixteen inches in diamater, and three inches deep and twelve inches in diameter, and can be had polished or unpolished."

There are guesses in many quarters that gold will be stabilized around $35 an ounce. On that basis it is held the industry can operate at a splendid profit, provided other conditions are more or less normal.

Verdict of Accidental Death

Edward Maritus Green, 39, of San Francisco, captain of the lightship Adventurer, killed in a Colma automobile accident, Thursday, October 23, met an accidental death, according to a verdict returned by a coroner's jury at an inquest held at W. C. Lasswell's undertaking establishment last Tuesday morning. The inquest was conducted by County Coroner J. C. McGovern at the office of Deputy Coroner Luella D. Pepper.

LEGION SUPPORTS EDUCATION WEEK

The San Mateo County Council of the American Legion has promised support in celebrating American Education Week, November 6 to 12, inclusive. Every Post is being contacted to give this movement their earnest support and to devise ways and means of carrying out a plan that will assist the San Mate County Teachers' Association to get out the parents and insure a large and interested attendance at the school exhibits and affairs.

Legion speakers are particularly welcomed to stress the importance of the American public school system to our national problems of thorough Americanization of our citizenship and the preservation and understanding of the ideals and problems of self government, states County Council Commander Rapsey.

If assistance in making local arrangements is desired, Mr. F. M. Stanger, president of the San Mateo County Teachers' Association, who is at the Junior College, San Mateo, will be most willing to act, also to contact Comrade Merritt Brady, Commander of Burlingame Post and County Council Americanization chairman, who will gladly assist, and in addition announced Commander Rapsey, the County Council will hold its meeting in South San Francisco, in the American Legion hall, Friday night, November 3.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, held a board meeting on Wednesday evening, October 25, at the home of Mrs. Catherine Foreman. Final plans were made for the Jiggs dinner to be held Saturday, November 4, at 7 P. M. After the dinner there will be a social and dance. All who attend are assured a very enjoyable evening. All of the proceeds go toward purchasing uniforms for the drill team.

There will be a special meeting of the Unit on Wendesday evening, November 8, at the home of Mrs. Julia Jordan, 576 Bellevue avenue. All members be sure and attend, as this is our last meeting just prior to our annual membership pickup, which is November 12.

On Sunday, October 29, several of our members attended the department school of instruction in child welfare work. As this work is one of the most important objects in the Auxiliary, this conference was very helpful and instructive. Past Department President Lorena Good and Bessie Webber gave very helpful information on the child welfare work. Dr. Henry G. Watters, child welfare chairman for the western division of the American Legion, Mildred Beevil and Comrade McGonegal, department chairman for the Auxiliary and the Legion, all gave interesting talks.

Department President Ernestine Aylward and Department Secretary-Treasurer Ethel Flynn gave short talks to the members. Those attending from Daly City Unit were President Craft, Catherine Foreman, Julia Jordan and Madeline Ford.

This year the Auxiliary has more work to do than ever before. There are more veterans who need help and more orphans to be cared for. But a few can not do it alone. It is, therefore, necessary that every woman who is eligible to the American Legion Auxiliary should serve now as in "other days," by joining the Auxiliary now. Let's make this a banner year in helping our needy ones.

GRACE J. HILL.

LARGE CROWD AT COUNCIL MEETING

A crowd that filled the City Auditorium to capacity last Monday evening listened to a one-hour address by Mayor H. H. Smith, in which the mayor told of Daly City's development from a small city of 26 years ago to the city of the present.

The various economical plans in city gavernment that have made possible for Daly City a per capita cost of government about one-third the average cost of government in cities of like size were fully explained. Particular emphasis was given to the good work done by the fire department, which has so well satisfied the board of underwriters that Daly City enjoys a very low fire insurance rate on homes.

The Daly City Scavenger Company was given a contract to collect the garbage in Daly City.

Mayor H. H. Smith announced that he did not intend to seek re-election next April.

KEEP IGNITION ON

The ignition switch should never be turned off when descending a hill on compression, according to the Free Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. The practice causes an accumulation of raw fuel in the muffler which may explode and damage the muffler when the switch is turned on again. Meanwhile, the additional resistance gained by having the switch turned off is negligible.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NEWS OF INTEREST

On Tuesday, October 21, the eighth grades of Crocker and Woodrow Wilson schools had their semi-annual outing. Accompanied by Miss Hauptli, Mrs. Kahn, Mrs. Hanselman, one of the P. T. A. members, Mr. Mathews and Mr. Crane, the children enjoyed a pleasant hike through Muir Woods. After a picnic lunch and numerous games everyone started home. Weary but happy at the end of the trip, all agreed that the day had been a huge success.

Jefferson school defeated Crocker in an exciting handball game. The final score was 28 to 0. Members of the winning team were Dino Donati, Aladino Serini, Frank Luchesi, Mike Perata and David Gaggero. Two sets of doubles and two of singles were played. Jefferson won every set.

A policeman in New York City said he came upon Conrad W. Michaels beating three men with a yowling cat which he held by the tail.

rendered a lengthy and detailed report on the principal activities of the association during his term of office.

To the officers and members of the Daly City Merchants' Association:

Having had the honor of serving as President for four consecutive years, and the time having arrived for me to resign the office to the newly elected President, it is proper at this time for me to render a report and account of the work and accomplishments of the Merchants' Association during the time of my administration.

While subject to the obligations and duties of the office, I have not been unmindful of many pleasant associations, and of the confidence and support of the officers and members which I have enjoyed.

I take this opportunity to thank the officers and members who have served on committees and have given their time and energy in behalf of the Merchants' Association and the interests which it represents.

I wish also to thank the city officials of Daly City, the county officials of San Mateo county, the officials of the City and County of San Francisco, and the State of California, and the Federal government, whose assistance and co-operation has been of great help in the solution of problems of interest to Daly City and vicinity.

Public Improvements

The Daly City Merchants' Association has taken an interest not only in matters personal to themselves, but also in cases of general and public interest, and with a view to rendering assistance whenever possible to those in public office, and to lend support to every proposition which is believed to be for the best interest of the community, and on the other hand to oppose everything considered detrimental to public good.

With those ends in view, one of the first activities of the Association was the interest taken in the matter of the paving of the street at the railroad crossing at Niantic and Mateo avenues, where for years there was no outlet to the main highway except over almost impassable chuck-holes, high rails and other obstructions sufficient to keep any motorist from attempting a second trip over it. After more than a year of earnest endeavor through the work of committees from the Merchants' Association, the officials of the City and County of San Francisco were finally prevailed upon to complete the work, and Daly City has another good paved street leading into Junipero Serra boulevard to the western portion of San Francisco.

Another matter which the Association took an interest in was the procuring of new electric lights on Mission street, and although this improvement was obtained while Mr. John J. Fahey was President, it will be remembered that the Merchants sponsored the proposition and worked for its accomplishment.

In 1929 the Association took up the matter of exorbitant insurance rates in Daly City, and while the Association was not sucecssful in this matter at the time, it laid the foundation for a reduction of rates in the future, and the rates have since been reduced from 60 to 35 cents per hundred.

The Association has from time to time rendered valuable assistance to the Daly City Council in such matters as the regulation of the sale of fireworks, the storage and collection of garbage, the regulating of peddler's licenses, and in formulating an ordinance regulating plumbing.

On complaint being made to the Merchants' Association, the lighting service was improved by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company; the mail service was improved by the postal authorities; an office of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company was established at 6301 Mission street, where the people can pay their bills without going to the head office; and an effort was made to get a new post office for Daly City.

An effort was also made to induce the Market Street Railway Company to run the Number 14 and 18 cars to Colma, making that the terminus instead of Daly City, and charging a five cent fare.

Although a committee of the Daly City Merchants' Association had been working on the proposition for some time prior thereto, on February 18, 1931, a special meeting was called and held at the City Hall for the purpose of speeding up matters preliminary to the actual work of widening Mission street and San Jose avenue, at which time there was a large attendance of city and county officials of San Francisco, of San Mateo county, and of Daly City, and a permanent committee was appointed to take up the matter of getting the necessary funds for the project, and the following were appointed on the committee: Supervisor Victor Canepa, Engineer Clyde Healy, Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey, Secretary W. H. Clay, A. B. Frank, R. A. McNeil, W. J. Varley, President Andrew Vireno, Mayor H. H. Smith, City Councilman Arthur Bodien, City Councilman John J. Fahey, Angelo Olcese, Joseph Garibaldi, William Moore, Fred A. Steinman.

Ever since that time the Merchants' Association, committees and officers have been kept busy attending meetings, making trips to the State Capital at Sacramento, and assisting in every way possible to promote the project. The latest report is to the effect that the work will be completed in the early part of 1934, and will cost nearly one million dollars, much of which will be spent in Daly City.

Social Activities

It has been the practice of the Daly City Merchants' Association to enjoy a banquet at least once a year, at which all business cares and worries are forgotten and entertainment and refreshments are in order. These have always been well attended and have served to promote friendliness and a spirit of good fellowship. Committees from the Merchants' Association have from year to year taken part in Christmas and other celebrations.

The annual picnic of the Daly City Merchants' Association is an event which has always been looked forward to by the people of Daly City as the occasion for a great outing at which times thousands of Daly City's citizens have enjoyed themselves.

Conclusion

It is impossible to embody in a report of this character all of the activities in which the Merchants' Association has taken part, but the foregoing shows the principal things which have been of interest to the merchants and the people and in which the merchants have taken an active part.

As time goes on, experience has shown that there is always something arising which is of the greatest importance to the community and which cannot be materially aided by any one man alone, but requires the concerted action of a considerable number of representative citizens. For this reason alone the Daly City Merchans' Association has from time to time demonstrated its ability to be of valuable service to its members and to the general public, and it is a pleasure to state that it enjoys the respect, not only of the people of Daly City, but of every official body or officer before whom its committees have had occasion to appear.

There has been many occasions when our committees and officers have appeared before boards and officers of San San Francisco, and also before the Governor of the state of California, and have had occasion to communicate with Congressmen and Senators, and the Postmaster General's office, and it is gratifying to say that upon all such occasions we have been accorded the greatest consideration, attention and respect.

We hope the good work started by the Merchants' Association will continue, and that the organization will grow stronger and more powerful as time goes by, so that its influence for good may be felt by the whole community, and that in turn the Association may have and enjoy the respect and confidence of the citizens.

Respectfully submitted.

ANDREW VIRENO, President.
W. H. CLAY, Secretary.

LOCAL NAZARENE CHURCH CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY

"Speak unto my people that they go forward."

The year 1933 marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Church of the Nazarene, dating from the organic union of the three original bodies, at Pilot Point, Texas, in 1908.

This Silver Jubilee celebration began October 29, and continues through November 26. The origin of the church is very interesting and would require pages if related. It is not a "split off," as some suppose, but a coming together of some small bodies of similar faith, belief and ideals. It has advanced from 228 churches with 10,000 members in 1908, to 1,963 churches in the United States, with 102,000 members, in 1933. This has been a period of sacrifice, devotion, and success. It is marvelous how God has led the church to her present position and condition. Her leaders claim no credit, they praise no human, but give God all the glory.

However, it can be truly said her founders were of Elijah's type, and her present leaders are no less spiritual or sacrificing.

God intended for this people to advance. "Go forward" was His command when they were overtaken by their enemies at the Red Sea. God never gives a "go forward" command without making it possible for people to obey.

The Nazarene church, like the early Apostolic church, has been persecuted for her strict doctrine and high standards. Through this a revival spirit continued until missionary work is being done on twelve foreign fields.

According to Rev. J. M. Gill, the Grace Church of the Nazarene is going forward in Daly City. The work is only eighteen months old, and on October 29, "Rally Day," 240 were present in Sunday school. Other services were well attended.

Speed Sign Says Come Down to 60

There is a sign on the outskirts of Sparta, Tenn., which warns motorists to slow down to 60 miles an hour, according to a report received by the National Automobile Club.

A rolling pin which has been in the same family for more than 150 years is still being used by Mrs. A. W. Beveridge, of Olathe, Colorado.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

(By the Journalism Class.)

Last Friday evening members of the Freshman class of the high school gave a class party which was one of the most important of the school activities so far this year. The party was held in the Senior Room of the school and was well attended by the freshmen. Several parents were present as guests. Mr. Ferguson, Miss Edna Smith and Mr. Hugh Paterson acted as faculty advisers.

A contest was held for the best and most original costumes and the first prize was awarded to Charles McArthur, who was dressed as a girl. Mr. Ferguson remarked that the costumes of the girls were particularly attractive, but added that Charles was the most attractive girl of the group.

Richard Silvanes was called upon to entertain the students, and because of his singing ability was awarded a ping-pong set.

Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Paterson added a spirit of hilarity to the occasion by leading the freshmen in a lot of peppy yells.

The party adjourned at 11 o'clock, everyone having had a good time. Considering the progress the Class of '37 has made so soon, we are going to expect a lot from the freshmen.

Members of the Jefferson student body are all set for a new, original, and interesting contest — namely, putting baby pictures on exhibition. The purpose of the contest is to determine who was the cutest baby at the age of two years or less. The members of the faculty are to be the judges. Three prizes will be awarded. Pictures are now being submitted and the contest will take place at an early date.

Now that the Dancing Club is organized, noon dances are beginning to be held. Permission has been given to have dances in the Little Theatre every other day from 12:30 until 1, and on Wednesday afternoons from 3:15 until 4, at the price of five cents per person.

At the last meeting, the charter of the Dancing Club was read. The purpose of the club is to teach dancing to students who wish to learn. The teacher in charge will also give instruction in the rules that govern all properly conducted social affairs. Anyone may join this club for the purpose of learning how to dance or of teaching others to dance.

Weekly dances will begin as soon as the radio has been moved from the Senior room into the Little Theatre. The first weekly dance will probably be held early in November.

Last Wednesday, during the fifth period, a very interesting and educational lecture was delivered before the students in the auditorium. Mr. J. Freeman, a noted forester who was long connected with the California State Bureau of Forestry, visited the school and spoke before the students. His subject was "The Trees of the Pacific Coast, Particularly of California." He used lantern slides to illustrate his lecture. The scenes of the trees were beautifully colored and gave the students an exceedingly clear idea of the importance of our forests from the point of view of both landscape beauty and general economic value.

The Jefferson Indians won their fourth consecutive game when they defeated the Santa Clara gridmen 6 to 0. It was a fairly even game, but the Indians had the advantage on offense. Santa Clara showed a good defense by stopping the Indians twice on the goal doorstep. After a thirty yard pass and a line buck, Roy Beecher took the ball over the goal standing up. Roy Burns was the main attraction of the day. He made many flashy runs and off-tackle smashes and was one of the mainstays of the team. Art Dowdell took up the bonecrushing work of the line, while Jim Swan and Ernest Everett did their bit. Beecher, Indian captain, backed up the line and was in nearly every play. Dave Johnston, Indian back, gave the crowd a splendid exhibition of coffin-corner kicking by putting the Santa Clara boys twice in a hole by his kicks.

The rally preceding the Santa Clara-Jefferson game last Friday revealed a new animation in the Jefferson student body. Since the appointment of Leo Becker as yell-leader, the rallies have been livened considerably.

At Friday's rally, a school song was introduced through the voices of eight boy students. The entire student body joined in the song, displaying much enthusiasm over it.

Emily Del Sarto, competent accordionist, contributed to the program with a peppy medley of marches and popular songs; and Junior Doyle and Duane Van Pelt added a novel bit by playing a number of harmonica duets.

Four members of the newly-organized Dramatics Club enacted an amusing one-act play; they were: Edwin Davies, Joe Farr, Doris Robertson and Mary Silicani.

Each rally and assembly program finds a greater amount of student talent being represented, especially from the lower classes.

Five members of the journalism class will travel to Stanford University tomorrow to attend the eleventh annual convention of the Central California Scholastic Press Association. Included in the day's program will be round-table discussions on the various phases of newspaper work, and a dinner featuring as speaker a prominent newspaper man. The students will also be allowed to witness the Stanford University-Olympic game. The students will be registered at 9 A. M. and spend the entire day at the college. This convention has been attended for many consecutive years by the Jefferson journalists and has proved itself of a high educational value.

We are in favor of Better Speech Week. Better speech and less of it.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Tuesday, the 28th day of November, 1933, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, of said day, at the main entrance of the City Hall of the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, No. 51 Wellington Avenue, in the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, Jesse W. Trask, as substituted trustee, will sell, at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash in lawful money of the United States, the following described real property situated in Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California:

Lot 4 in Block 19 as designated on the map entitled "Map of the Crocker Estate Tract Subdivision No. 1", which map was filed in the office of the Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, on June 1st, 1908, in Liber 6 of Maps at page 16.

Said sale will be made to satisfy the obligation secured by, and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in a certain deed of trust executed by Albert N. Daniels and Alice M. Daniels, his wife, grantors, to Northern Counties Title Insurance Company, a corporation, as trustee for the benefit and security of Maurice Tosch and Matilda Tosch, his wife, dated August 25, 1931, and recorded August 31, 1931, in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, in Volume 531 of Official Records of said County at page 465.

Said deed of trust and the obligation secured thereby was assigned by Maurice Tosch and Matilda Tosch, his wife, beneficiaries, to C. L. Lind and Hilda Lind, his wife, on October 21, 1931, and said assignment was recorded October 23, 1931, in Volume 535 of Official Records, at page 500, in the said County Recorder's office of the County of San Mateo, State of California.

Thereafter, on September 25, 1933, said C. L. Lind and Hilda Lind, his wife, as beneficiaries under said deed of trust, appointed the undersigned, Jesse W. Trask, as successor to and instead of said Northern Counties Title Insurance Company, a corporation, as trustee, which substitution and appointment was recorded October 13, 1933, in Volume 609 of Official Records, page 46, in the said County Recorder's office of the County of San Mateo, State of California.

Notice of breach of said obligation and election to sell said real property was recorded on December 1, 1932, in Volume 585 of Official Records, page 19, in the said County Recorder's office of the County of San Mateo, State of California.

Dated: October 31, 1933.

JESSE W. TRASK, Trustee.

France Sends More Felons Into Exile

This rare photograph shows French felons, sentenced to imprisonment on the penal islands off the coast of South America, being transported from the wharf at Marseilles to the prison ship La Rochelle for the dreary journey and banishment. Some 200 of the most desperate of malefactors against French law were rounded up for the sea voyage, being the first contingent of French criminals so honored in more than two years.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By L. L. STEVENSON

Increased business in Wall Street means prosperity for many despite what may happen to those who play the market. Employees of brokerage houses benefit of course through increased employment, extra pay and even bonuses. The brokers themselves benefit through increased commissions. Real estate interests also benefit because increased business, especially crowded board rooms, necessitate the rental of more space. But there are many others who share in the revival. For instance, the eating places of the financial district ranging from large restaurants and dining clubs to little basement establishments where only luncheons are served and customers feed standing up.

Barbers, taxicab drivers, bootblacks, even flower sellers reap profits when the market is booming or at least busy. The receipt of the telegraph and cable companies also increase greatly. The subways share in the increase as well. Many who carry long lines of stocks travel to and from the street underground. There are also many who travel on the elevated lines. During good times stationers and printers are also kept busy because of the necessity for office supplies. Then, too shopkeepers do a lot of business long after their usual hours since so many employees are kept late to catch up with the work. So while the lambs may get sheared not all of the wool goes to those who use the scissors.

Wall Street scene: An earnest, hatless, perspiring street preacher exhorting a crowd to turn to God. His voice rises high above the general tumult. It carries over into William street. But it doesn't disturb a group of ragged bootblacks busily engaged in pitching pennies.

Walking up from Wall Street, I stopped in St. Paul's churchyard. St. Paul's is old—it was used by worshipers of Trinity when that church was burned. The headstones are so old the inscriptions on many cannot be read. But the trees are young. Once St. Paul's was on the bank of the Hudson and was built to face the river. Thus it really turns its back to Broadway, though the famous statue of St. Paul is in a niche over the Broadway entrance.

From St. Paul's, I wandered down Vesey street searching for a little restaurant that was conducted by Frank, former chef of the Astor. But Frank's had disappeared. Too bad. Used to like to eat fish at Frank's though it was always a gamble as to the kind that would be served, if any. He'd go to the Fulton market early every morning and select only the freshest and best. If there were none that suited him, no fish was served that day.

A lot of small shops that squatted on Church street in the shadows of the Sixth avenue El have also disappeared. Most of them had the greater part of their stocks on the sidewalk and some had earthen floors. But they furnished livings for many sharp-eyed men and women. The old shops were razed when the Eighth avenue subway was built. Wonder what's become of the proprietors?

Street scene: Two smartly dressed young women exchanging punches on Park avenue near Eighty-sixth street. A doorman comes out and pries them apart. A newspaper man who had hurried forward thinking he was seeing a battle between debutantes, turns away dejectedly. They were only two maids trying to fight it out because one had taken the job of the other.

Speaking of battles, there was that incident at one of those nearby bungalow colonies. A gentleman who had remained rather late at a party came home and found a strange man. There was an immediate entanglement and the stranger was tossed out. Then an indignant woman wanted to know why her husband had been ejected. And the victor in the battle learned that he was in the wrong bungalow. Next season, he's going to a place where the architecture is more varied.

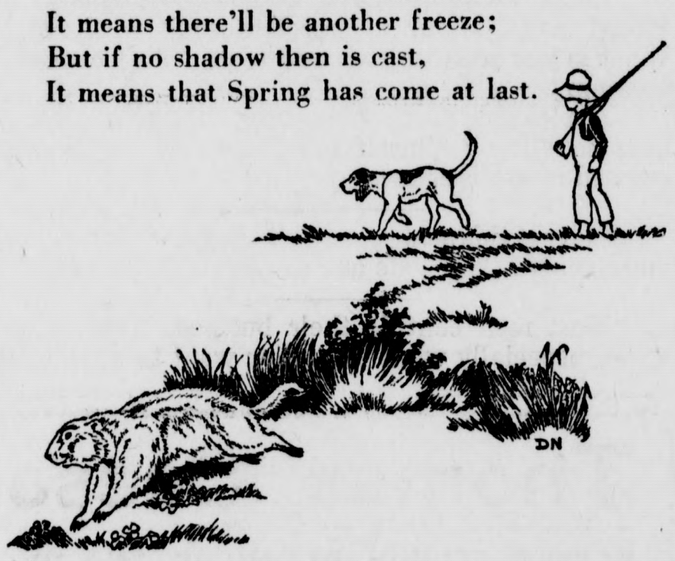
AMERICAN ANIMALS

WOODCHUCK

ON FEBRUARY first we say,
"Tomorrow will be ground-hog day."
Which means that woodchucks will come out
To yawn and stretch and look about.

And if his shadow woodchuck sees,
It means there'll be another freeze;
But if no shadow then is cast,
It means that Spring has come at last.



Of course this yarn is just a joke
That's only told by simple folk;
For woodchuck only leaves his den
When days are bright and warm again.

He feeds on clover
leaves with zest,
But likes the apple
orchard best,
And always keeps a watchful eye
To see if boys or dogs
are nigh.

STUDY COLOR IN FOOD SELECTION

Greens Rich in Vitamin A; Yellows Important.

By EDITH M. BARBER

COLOR has come to be of much importance in our lives. This generation often selects its house decorations, its kitchen equipment and its clothing with regard to interesting color schemes. People and houses are dressed much more gayly than they were previously. We are told by psychologists that we respond in general well-being to harmonious colors and now the nutritionists tell us that we must or may consider color somewhat in our choice of foods from the nutrition standpoint.

This statement applies particularly to vitamin A, which is allied with yellow and green coloring in many foods. All greens are particularly rich in these vitamins. Comparing them by the pound, escarolle at the moment has been tested higher even than spinach, which we have considered the optimum among the greens. Kale ranks with spinach. Lettuce and romaine, while they contain an important amount, are much further down the scale. All greens are of value; turnip tops, beet tops and dandelion greens in their season should be used liberally.

Among other vegetables we find that carrots lead the list. Sweet potatoes, peas, green peppers, brussels sprouts, string beans, broccoli, tomatoes and artichokes are among the vegetables which rank high, although other vegetables such as cauliflower, asparagus, cabbage and eggplant also contain amounts worthy of notice. White potatoes contain some vitamin A, but sweet potatoes (yellow in color) contain eight or nine times as much. It is very interesting to note that the green outer leaves of lettuce and green asparagus have a much higher content than do the bleached vegetables.

Among the fruits we find prunes at the head of the list, with bananas second. Of course bananas are yellow, while the prune plum is reddish when fresh. Avocadoes, cantaloupes, cherries, watermelon and dates are next in the list. Oranges, apples, pineapple and grapes contain worthwhile amounts.

Animal fats are generally higher in vitamin A than vegetable fats, although olive oil, yellow palm and corn oil contain some. Yellow corn, by the way, has a larger amount than white corn. It has only been recently that there have been any units for measuring the amount of vitamin A in various foods. These have been worked out, however, according to the amount of this vitamin which it takes to keep an experimental animal in good health after it has grown satisfactorily. The new edition of Dr. Hendy Sherman's "Chemistry, Food and Nutrition," which has recently come from the press, gives us a comparison of all these foods in units and enables us to judge accurately the amount which we get. If a diet is short of vitamin A the symptoms shown may be susceptibility to trouble with eyes, to respiratory diseases, to skin, ear and sinus infections, and also to infections of the digestive tract. A generous amount of vitamin A in food increases the general condition of health and vitality. One very interesting thing about this vitamin is that an excess may be stored in the body so that if for any reason food is deficient in it, for some time we can get along. Long deprivation of this vitamin during the war in Europe resulted in many serious cases of disease whose cause was traced directly to the absence of this essential vitamin. All of us who have plenty of money to spend for food can guard against these diseases very easily. Where money is short it has been found very important to make sure that a liberal amount of milk and some cod liver oil are included in the daily plan.

The Next Job

My Neighbor Says:

WHEN cooking eggs wet the shells thoroughly in cold water before placing them in the boiling water and they will not creak.

Mothers of growing children, in preparing their foods, should consider well the properties foods contain. Lime for bone-making is obtained from milk and carrots, iron for blood from spinach, egg yolk and liver and lean meat, cabbage, raisins and tomatoes; the phosphorus from fish, beans, peas and whole grains.

Let potatoes stand 15 minutes in hot water before baking and it will take half the usual time to bake them.

Banana Sherbet.

3 large bananas.
¾ cup powdered sugar.
2 tablespoons lemon juice.
1 cup cream whipped.
1½ teaspoons vanilla.
½ cup nut meats chopped.
2 egg whites.

Mash bananas to a pulp, add sugar and lemon juice. Chill. Whip cream, add vanilla and nuts, and add to first mixture. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into mixture. Nut meats may be omitted. Turn into automatic freezing trays and freeze two to three hours.

Liver With Cream Sauce.

Slice the liver one-third inch thick. Scald and strip off the skin on edges. Drain and cook quickly with two sliced onions in three tablespoons of butter. Pour in cream to cover and let simmer ten minutes, closely covered. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Kidney Stew.

1 large kidney.
1 tablespoon butter
1 onion
1½ tablespoons flour.
Salt and pepper.

Remove fat and sinews from kidney. Wash thoroughly and place in saucepan with one-half teaspoon salt and enough water to cover. Allow it to come to boil, and then simmer for five minutes until very tender. Remove the kidney, retaining the water in which it has been cooked, and cut in small pieces. Slice onion and cook with the butter in frying pan. When light brown add flour, stirring gently, and one and one-half cups of water in which kidney was cooked. Add kidney and heat. One tablespoon of nonalcoholic sherry may be added.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

"Hocus-Pocus"

WE ARE all familiar with hocus-pocus of various kinds—it appears in almost all fields of endeavor—and in each, it implies the presence of charlatanism, mummery, and deception.

Originally, however, the phrase was associated practically exclusively with conjury. Here it was simply the gibberish indulged in by stage magicians to work their spells, presumably.

The term itself is a modification of Ochus Bochus, who, in the Seventeenth century, was an Italian wizard, as famous as Houdini and Thurston of our day.

It might be stated also in this connection that Ben Jonson in his "Magnetic Lady" used Hokos-Pokos as the name of the juggler.

BEAUTY TALKS

By MARJORIE DUNCAN

BRUSHES IN BEAUTY SCHEME

IN THE beauty scheme of things, brushes play a very active part. There's the hair brush, nail brush, clothes brush, tooth brush, eyebrow brush, shoe brush, bath brush and if the skin will stand it the complexion brush. These brushes are important accessories toward good grooming and as you value personal loveliness add these beauty aids to your toiletries. And keep them busy, too.

Now let us see what the requisites for the hair brush are: it should have long, flexible bristles, not too soft or the purpose (of stimulating the circulation through the scalp, cleaning and polishing every strand of hair) is defeated. On the other hand, the bristles must not be too stiff or they will irritate the scalp. As in all things the happy medium is preferable in the matter of brush bristles.

Harsh bristles should be avoided—whether in a hair brush, clothes brush, nail brush, etc. Such bristles are unkind to scalp, clothes and hands. This holds for complexion brush too. In fact, such a brush is only for the woman with an oily or heavy type of skin. When using it, the movements should be gently upward and outward. Remember that the skin can be soaped and cleansed, without scrubbing or harsh treatment.

The tooth brush we need not go into. Your dentist is the logical one to advise the type of brush you need. But here again medium bristles are advisable for the majority of people, and remember that the bristles should be so arranged that every tooth and every part of the mouth can be thoroughly cleansed. Every dentist will tell you that two tooth brushes are better than one—and every man, woman and child should own two and alternate them.

The eyebrow brush is a small affair with one or two little rows of bristles and this important accessory is so inexpensive that I know many women who keep two or three in their dressing table drawer. One removes any excess powder remaining on brows and one gives the brows and lashes a silky sheen after the mascara has dried. The way to brush the brows, you know, is first the wrong way, then into place. Lashes are brushed in semi-circular fashion, uppers upward and around as though you would curl every little hair under and the lower lashes downward and around.

THE CLEAN LOOK

EVERYWHERE you go in health and beauty circles you hear a great deal about "that clean look."

The phrase is becoming as popular as a sure-fire wisecrack or a first seller in slogans. It refers to much, much more than superficial cleanliness. It points to perfection and polish.

Some time ago in the course of a beauty lecture I referred to "that clean, crisp look."

I said two things were necessary to achieve it. Perhaps my audience expected me to say: Soap and brushes. But I had reference to: Respect for one's self and respect and thoughtfulness for those around us. And again I repeat that I do not mean merely bathing or washing face and hands. These are important—very important—yes. But they are elementary, fundamental. I take it for granted that every woman has made a habit of bathing every day and keeping her skin clean.

But that clean, crisp look goes further. It includes brushing the hair. The woman who can boast that clean look never has her hair disheveled. Every strand and wisp is in place. For trimness and neatness go with that clean look. Your coiffure may be elaborately intriguing or very simple. The arrangement does not matter—at least it is secondary in importance to a neat, "always-in-place" arrangement which is another way of saying "that clean look."

Brows must be brushed too. They are an important factor in the perfect picture. And if a little wild hair, here and there decides to march backward or out of line it must be disciplined. If brushing won't help—then pluck. But, mind you, pluck only the unruly hairs, for natural brows are now the vogue.

A clean, clear complexion is another important factor. Discolorations, oiliness, shine, blackheads or eruptions all take something away from "that clean look."

Well-kept hands, perfectly groomed nails come in for their share of attention too.

As for clothes—buttons should be where they belong, stocking seams straight, heels kept in repair and shoes polished, suits and coats brushed free from dust, and lingerie touches always fresh and dainty.

Even make-up when properly applied adds to that clean look.

Learn to relax. I know a busy executive who always looks rested, interesting and alert. The reason for this is: she has learned the value of relaxation. Before and after her luncheon she rests for a few minutes. Even if she is at her desk—she simply lets her mind become a complete blank. Then she "lets go" shoulders, arms, her whole body. Or while waiting for her lunch to be served she relaxes.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY

Certain phases of the National Recovery Administration's buying campaign merit careful consideration.

The President said in his statement of June 16, when he signed the Recovery Act, that the long-dormant buying power must be brought into line with increased cost production. But he wisely withheld advice to the people as to when to start supplying their prudent needs until there was ample and unmistakable justification. He waited until he was convinced that the many hundreds of thousands removed from the ranks of the unemployed were being continued in their jobs, thereby creating an absolutely new purchasing element in every community. These worthy citizens finally have been enabled to qualify as consumers.

Banking and industrial statistics show that the reabsorption of three million workers, based on minimum wages provided by N. R. A., which apply only to what is termed "common labor," of itself creates a buying power in this country of several billions per year. That impetus in trade, which did not exist four months ago, would push up prices, without considering the logical incentive of employers to cover their increased costs of operation.

Another salient feature of this campaign is its name, "Now is the time to buy." The people, upon whose intelligence the President depends for its success, should accept it and support it for what it is—a considerate and valuable reminder of our duty to ourselves and to each other.

"'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." Some who pay alimony will concede that it would have been a whole lot better.

We grieve for the dead, but we may be consoled by the fact that they don't have to worry about how they can keep their Blue Eagle.

N. R. A. sends out questionnaire concerning employment and wages. Seems to be stealing Literary Digest's stuff.

Somehow we can't help feeling a bit less enthusiastic over celebrities whose pictures adorn soap and cosmetic advertisements.

An exchange remarks that a model wife is one "who loves and respects her husband, but still has a feeling that she might have done better."

A MESSAGE TO GARCIA

One of the most dramatic exploits of the Spanish-American war was recalled in a recent article concerning Colonel Andrew S. Rowan, U. S. Army, retired.

In 1898, shortly before the declaration of war on Spain, President McKinley desired to communicate with General Garcia of the Cuban forces, who was with his revolutionary army somewhere in the wilds of Cuba, just where, no one knew. Rowan, then a Lieutenant, was selected for the hazardous and seemingly impossible task of finding Garcia, and set out alone on his mission.

Going first to Jamaica, he crossed to Cuba in an open boat, and after a nine day search, aided by Cuban patriots, he found General Garcia, delivered his message and returned to Washington with the information desired by the President, after several narrow escapes from capture and death.

His exploit was immortalized in Elbert Hubbard's editorial, "A Message to Garcia," of which more than forty million copies have been printed in many languages. Rowan in 1923 wrote his own story of "How I Carried the Message to Garcia. Hubbard's editorial and Rowan's story are both inspiring pieces of writing which one should not fail to read.

THE SUPREME COURT

It is interesting to note that while thirty-one citizens of the United States have been elevated to the Presidency, only eleven have been appointed Chief Justice since the foundation of our government—Jay, Rutledge, Ellsworth, Marshall, Taney, Chase, Waite, Fuller, White, Taft and Hughes.

One of these, John Rutledge, was never confirmed by the Senate, as evidence of approaching insanity developed about the time of his appointment by President Washington in 1795, and Ellsworth was named in his stead a few months later.

John Marshall served longer than any other Chief Justice, 34 years, and died in office at the age of 87. Jay, the first Chief Justice, was the youngest at the time of his appointment, being only 44. Marshall was appointed at the age of 46.

Among the former Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, Joseph Story, appointed at the age of 32, was the youngest, while William Johnson was 33 at the time of his appointment.

The high ability and undisputed integrity of our highest court have always been a source of pride to every American citizen. The court as at present constituted firmly maintains the best traditions of the distinguished jurists who served in the earlier days of the Republic.

THE SPEED OF LIGHT

Marvelous as was the discovery that sound impulses could be transmitted by telephone and radio, their mere transmission would be of little value if they traveled only with the speed of ordinary sound.

To illustrate: If one were in San Francisco and desired to talk to someone in New York City, and had a voice loud enough to be heard that distance, it would take nearly four hours for the message to cross the continent—for sound travels only 720 miles an hour.

But, fortunately, electrical and radio impulses travel with the speed of light, which for all practical purposes is instantaneous for terrestial distances, or about 186,000 miles a second.

Incidentally, it may be mentioned that so far the longest combined telephone and radio conversation ever carried on by a regular toll customer was between San Diego, California, and Stockholm, Sweden, a distance of 8,630 miles. By special arrangement longer distances have been covered.

Many improvements in telephone and radio communications will be made in the future, but there will be no increase in speed. Always the sounds are transmitted with the speed of light, the speediest thing in the universe.

AN AIR FLIVVER

Within five years a business man living in a distant suburb may board his one-passenger air flivver, fly to the city and alight on his office roof. Returning at night he may land safely in his own yard with ease and safety. Such is the prediction of conservative pilots and engineers.

This may happen in less than five years if plans for the commercial manufacture of the autogyro are carried out. Invented by Juan de la Cierva, a Spaniard, the autogyro is fitted with an ordinary airplane motor and propeller, but in addition has revolving wings in a sort of windmill arrangement which enables it to sustain itself in the air at slow speed, thus permitting it to rise or land in the space of an ordinary tennis court.

The revolving wings are said to give the machine stability in flight, besides making a crash to earth almost impossible, even though the pilot should entirely lose control. It is declared that it "flies like an airplane, but settles to earth like a parachute."

An American company is now perfecting a design for commercial production. If the claims of its promoters are made good, the autogyro may soon revolutionize short distance passenger traffic.

We won't really know who won the World war until we find out how much indemnity Herr Hitler will demand from the Allies.

How the mighty have fallen! All Notre Dame could do was to hold Kansas to a scoreless tie.

BAD BOYS REFORMED

Like all other cities, Detroit has had its bad boy problem. From the juvenile court records it appeared that in a recent year one out of every eight boys from 17 to 19 years of age had been arrested. Detroit led all the big cities in juvenile delinquency.

Then a number of citizens took notice of the situation and organized the Boys' Club of Detroit. A four-story building was fitted up with lockers, showers, games, workshops and the like, and the boys were invited to make themselves at home. The membership now numbers nearly 4,000, with dues of 25 cents a year.

These boys are drawn from the class which formerly roamed the streets, engaging in all sorts of deviltry. Now they spend much of their time in their club, playing games or building radios, airplane models, toys and many useful articles. A specialty is making toys for crippled children, craftsmanship going hand in hand with social education.

Members of the club seldom come before the juvenile court any more. With suitable outlets for their energies they do not find it necessary to engage in anti-social activities. Great good has been accomplished through the initiative of a group of forward-looking citizens who did not believe that the "bad" boy was as bad as he seemed to be. And the results have proved that they were right.

NEW DEAL'S DECALOGUE

One of the new Assistant Secretaries of State is Harry F. Payer, of Cleveland, who, in a recent speech, laid down the Ten Commandments of the New Deal partly as follows, says the Enid, Oklahoma, Events:

"First—Thou shalt not live, my dear country, beyond thy means.

"Second—Thou shalt not lose confidence in thyself or thy great strength.

"Third—Thou shalt not make Mammon thy god, but neither shalt thou be unmindful of thy monetary system, lest it destroy thee.

"Fifth—Thou shalt not make gold thy god but thy servant.

"Sixth—Thou shalt not permit the unemployment of thy people, well beloved; this is the first and greatest commandment.

"Seventh—Thou shalt not fail to manage well and rationalize thy industry.

"Eighth—Thou shall not suffer the paradox of poverty amidst plenty, else thou sinnest previously."

AN EXPENSIVE GUEST

Count Ilya Tolstoy of Russia, when lecturing in the United States, had a very thrifty manager, who did not propose to allow the Count to lend his presence to any function without pay. So, when a group of Chicago professors sought to honor the Count by inviting him to a luncheon, the manager wired an acceptance, but stipulated a fee of $50 would be charged.

The hospitably inclined professors were at first dumbfounded by the suggestion that they must pay $50 for the privilege of entertaining the Count. After consultation they delegated one of their number to reply to the manager, which he did in the following telegram:

"How do you get that way? We might be able to afford breakfast or a chocolate soda with the Count. What is you scale for tea and toast with Tolstoy? Also go jump in the lake."

A pleasing part of the story is that Count Tolstoy later told it on himself and exhibited the telegram to amused newspaper men.

Correct this sentence: "I perfectly understand the requirements of my code and am living up to them."

Most men confide their business troubles to their wives, especially when the latter want to buy something.

Annual Red Cross Roll Call Scheduled for November

A. L. Schafer, Red Cross manager in the Pacific area, advises officers of local Red Cross Chapters who are preparing for the annual Roll Call, November 11-30, that the Red Cross has expended $1,468,241 for unemployment and disaster relief and for regular services in Alaska, Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington during the past year.

In picturing the magnitude of the Red Cross accomplishments throughout the nation, Mr. Schafer points out that the National Red Cross during the year expended for all services, $4,041,000. At the same time the 3,700 Chapters put out an additional $7,500,000 to meet the needs of local committees, bringing the total Red Cross expenditures close to $12,000,000.

Distribution of flour and clothing for families in distress continues to engage the attention of many Red Cross Chapters in several states.

In this connection Mr. Shafer says that 5,420,767 sacks of flour, each being 24½ pounds in size, have been distributed to Chapters in the Pacific area, benefiting 485,839 families.

During the same period 7,027,322 yards of cotton materials, 3,073,904 ready-made garments, and 142,800 blankest and comforters were issued to Chapters for needy families.

While the Red Cross was accomplishing these things in the Pacific states, other units were busy throughout the nation reaching more than 25,000,000 persons with 10,688,307 barrels of flour and 90,000,000 articles of clothing.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

That when you buy all you buy in the city in which you live, you benefit and so does the home city. Therefore, it is easy to see that only foolish people spend their money away from home.

Some people never seriously attempt to learn anything about the business concerns of their home city, and permit themselves to go along with a mistaken idea that their city can progress without business. It can't be done, and the sooner they realize this fact the sooner their city will grow to be a better place in which to live and make a living.

A dam of education should be erected to stop the flow of money that is made in a city and allowed to flow to other cities, building up other cities at the expense of the home city.

Every effort should be made to divert this money back into the right channel, so it will be spent at home, where it will do constructive work and benefit all.

Clarence Hathaway, who, as every one knew, was to be the next ambassador to Great Britain if the President-elect had his way—and the President-elect was accustomed to having his way—emerged from the impressive doorway of his residence, and stood for a moment before he signified his consciousness that a gleaming Hispana Suiza waited before him, a chauffeur in maroon livery at the wheel, a footman similarly attired holding open the door.

It was a perfect spring morning. From the marble balcony on the second story an American flag flew stiff in the breeze and shone in the sun. Gravely, Hathaway saluted; the chauffeur and footman, shaken from their stiff correctness, faced the American flag and saluted in their turn; Hathaway turning to them smiling.

"A fine day for the President, Jarvis—a great day for all of us!"

"Yes, indeed, sir; Squires and I 'ave been remarking it."

"The Shoreham, Jarvis. We're stopping there for the attorney general designate and his mother, and Governor and Mrs. Hildreth."

"Yes, sir."

The dignitaries in question were already standing on the steps of the Shoreham as the Hispana Suiza slid to a silent stop in front of the hotel. Hathaway alighted and greeted them in turn.

"Good morning, Mrs. Griffin. Well, how does it feel to be the mother of a cabinet member? Mabel, you look as fresh as a May morning. What a day! Made in Heaven, Anne would say—bless her heart!"

"I wonder how she is this morning?" The new attorney general spoke with a slight lisp.

"Oh, she's finely," announced Mabel Hildreth, settling herself comfortably in the corner of the car. Both the governor and his wife bore unmistakable signs of long-continued rural prosperity, over which a slight veneer of recent official importance lay somewhat insecurely; but there was something very likable about their rather round and florid faces, and Mrs. Hildreth retained traces of a girlish bloom which, though somewhat faded, must once have been very lovely.

"I haven't heard what she was to wear," interposed Mrs. Griffin eagerly.

"Why, lace of course! Venetian point, so old that it's fawn-color, combined with tan georgette and silk, this morning. Rose-point and white satin this evening. Noel wouldn't hear of anything less."

The car swung around the Treasury building and sped down the cleared width of Pennsylvania avenue, banked on either side with good-natured, orderly crowds. At the Capitol, the host, as he guided his guests through the revolving door, issued a few directions.

"You fellows join your respective colleagues now in the waiting rooms—you're for the floor of the senate, as of course you know. I'll take the ladies to the gallery."

The dingy old chamber was filling fast as Hathaway and the two ladies took their places in the gallery. The gavel descended.

The speaker of the house and the Vice President-elect were, in turn, escorted to seats beside the Vice President. The applause, which, though technically forbidden had rung out again and again unchecked, was quickly, voluntarily hushed; then it resounded again, echoing and re-echoing.

The President-elect had entered the chamber, accompanied by an escort of three senators and three congressmen, and had taken his place in front of the raised platform where the Vice President sat. And, when he had done so, he lifted his eyes to the senators' gallery, just as a lady, with a soft full cloak partially covering a dress of heavy deep cream lace, came down the aisle and took her place in the vacant seat between her golden-haired girl and her shaggy-haired boy. For a moment she sat with her head bent, her drooping hat with its delicate plumes concealing her face. "She is praying," Hathaway said to himself, choking a little. Then she looked up, and across the chamber, meeting the President's eyes; seemed to steady herself; and, putting her arms around her children, rose with them to accept the tribute of applause which rocked the room. Not until she raised her ungloved hand, with a gentle gesture which at one and the same time acknowledged and checked the outburst, did the tumult lessen. Then she gathered the folds of her cloak around her, and with complete composure, grace, and dignity, reseated herself.

"Neal told me that when he took his oath of office as senator," Hathaway whispered, in a voice that shook, "he was almost overcome, when he looked up and saw Anne sitting in the gallery and—and found he could go on, after all. After that, he never came into the chamber without instinctively looking up to see if she were here. He did it today—did you notice? . . . No woman ever had such a tribute in the senate before. I wonder whether any ever will again."

His companions were only half listening to him. It did not matter. The President's speech was the next thing that mattered; and after a long time—an eternity it seemed to Hathaway—suddenly, the senate was adjourned, and the occupants of the galleries, hurrying to the doors, were rushing through the corridors and down the staircases. Steering his charges towards the stage, temporarily erected over the east steps of the Capitol, where the President was to take his oath and make his address, he turned them over to an officer, with hasty instructions that Mrs. Griffin should be taken to her place behind her son, and Mrs. Hildreth to her place beside her husband. Then he directed his own steps to the open space directly in front of the platform which had been roped off for the specially invited guests who had been in the senate chamber, but who did not have seats on the stage.

The platform was crowded, and the sun shone full upon it; a shaft of this fell as if straight from heaven, upon the President's lifted face, as he emerged from the mass behind him, and stood revealed between the white columns, beside the black-robed justice.

Hathaway looked up at the lady in fawn-color. She was very close to the President now, the folds of her cloak falling softly about her slim form, her earnest eyes fixed on his face, as they had been in the senate chamber. He had taken the oath, the justice had stepped back, and the President had begun his speech. Gradually, a greater earnestness, a greater power, crept into his words; his strangely youthful, vibrant face became beautified, it glowed as if from some inner light; the impassioned eloquence which had first made him famous had never been so lambent before. He was speaking about America, about her heritage, about her future, about her place on earth.

"Lord Almighty!" exclaimed a stout person sitting beside Hathaway, "I've always been patriotic, but no one ever made me feel this way about America before. I'll say we're going to have a great President—one of the greatest. He talks about the United States as if it were real, a person a—a woman. Like a man might talk about some one he was in love with—" Hathaway turned towards him.

"It is real," he said, "to the President. That's why he makes it seem real to you and me. You're right—he's making a great speech, one that will live. And the person who made all that real to him is his wife."

"Lord Almighty!" exclaimed the stout person. "You don't say so!" He laid a detaining hand on Hathaway's sleeve.

"I don't want to keep you, of course," he said, apologetically, "but I want you should tell me just a word, before you go, about—about his wife. You said—"

Hathaway smiled, and shook his head. But he stopped for a moment before he moved away, the crowd closing in on him as he went.

"I couldn't tell you about her in a week," he said. "I couldn't tell you if I stayed here all day, trying. Nobody could tell the real story, as it ought to be told, about the part a woman has in her husband's career, from very humble beginning through long, hard, drab, uneventful years, and on to ultimate supremacy. It's a part very different from what's popularly supposed, a part not only misunderstood, but underestimated. Nobody could do such a story justice, though dozens of able biographies will be written about the President; but somebody ought to try. Not only because then the American people might appreciate—partly at least—their President's wife. But also because hundreds of women, who are longing to help their husbands, but feeling that they are failing to do so, would find consolation and encouragement in the story of Anne Chamberlain."

"Why don't you write the story yourself?" persisted the westerner. "Or, if you can't do it yourself—I presume you're a busy man—why don't you find some one else who will? Some one you could trust to make a try at it, anyways. Lord Almighty, man! Don't fade away from me like that!"

For the westerner found that he was speaking to the crowd in general, and not to one person in particular. He was also being looked at curiously, and he himself looked about in some bewilderment. He had an engagement.

"Just the same," he said to himself, as he scurried, panting, across the park, "I hope I put an idea into that slick-looking fellow's head, and I believe I did. I believe he heard me after all. I believe he'll get somebody to write that story!"

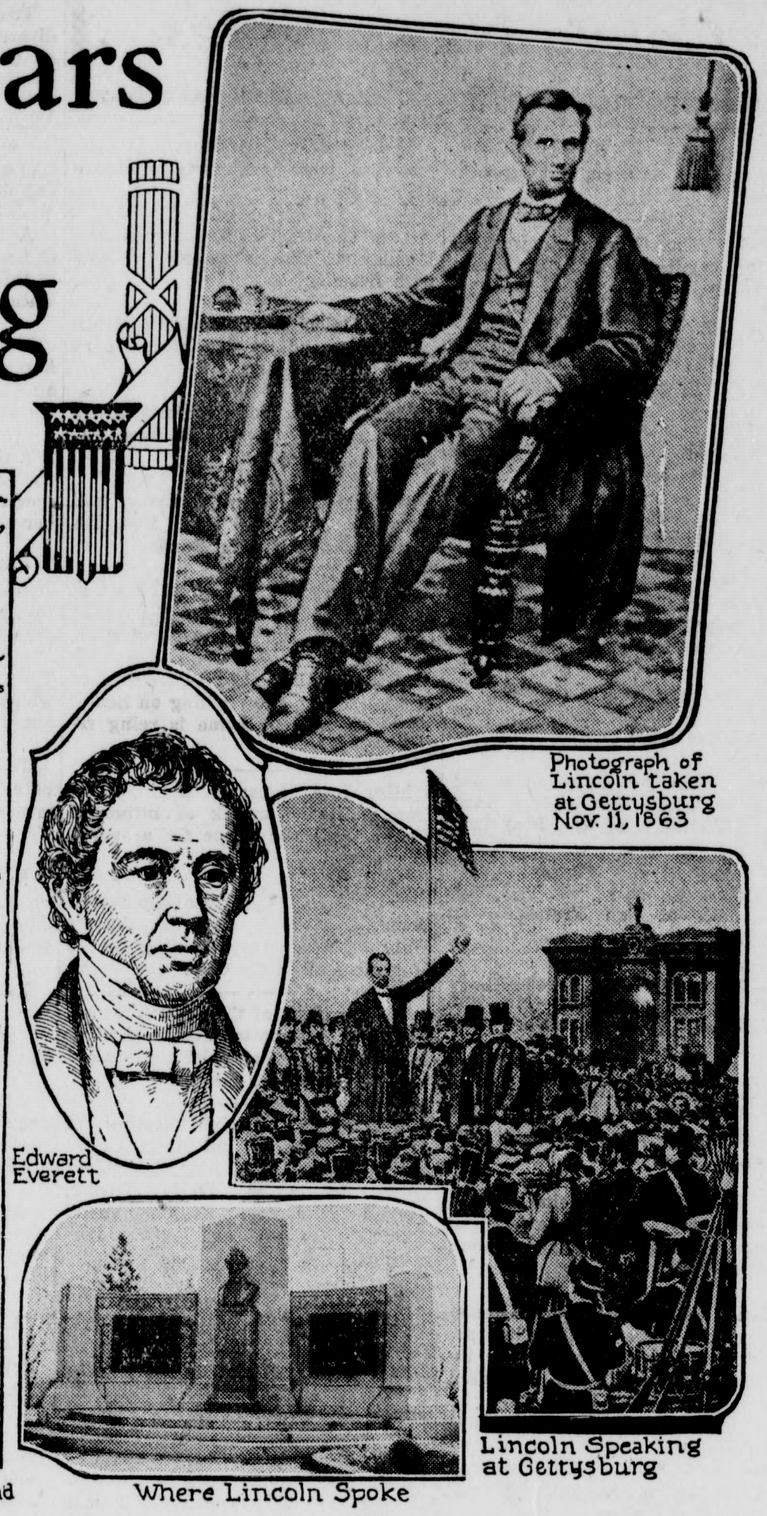
Seventy Years Since the Gettysburg Address



Photograph of Lincoln taken at Gettysburg Nov. 11, 1863

Edward Everett

Lincoln Speaking at Gettysburg

Where Lincoln Spoke

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives, that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here, have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

Manuscript of the Gettysburg Address in Lincoln's Own Hand

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IT WAS just 70 years ago that Abraham Lincoln, standing on the battlefield of Gettysburg, made a speech of exactly 272 words that has been called "a classic which will endure as long as the English language is spoken." And that is one of the mildest tributes amid the shower of extravagant praise which has been lavished upon a speech in which the speaker himself said "The world will little note nor long remember what we say here," thereby proving himself a poor prophet indeed, no matter how great he was in nearly every other respect.

So much has been said about Lincoln's Gettysburg address and so much has been written about it (including a 254-page book about a 272-word speech!) it would seem that we Americans, who are proud to claim this masterpiece of modern English eloquence as the product of one of our own kind, would know everything about it even down to the minutest detail. But it is probable that most of us know little more about it than the fact that Lincoln did deliver an immortal speech at Gettysburg a few months after the battle, and we have a more or less clear remembrance of some of the phraseology of the speech, beginning with the sonorous "Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal" and continuing to the magnificent climax of "that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth." But beyond those things, the average American knows very little about some of the facts connected with the speech which make it one of the most amazing paradoxes in history.

Most Americans know that Lincoln was something of an "also ran" so far as the choice of the committee in charge of the celebration at Gettysburg that day was concerned. They remember that the honor of being the "orator of the day" fell to Edward Everett and that his one-hour-and-fifty-minute speech has been forgotten, while the three-minute speech of Lincoln seems destined to immortality. But even though Everett's speech has been forgotten, how many of his fellow-countrymen know that the man himself was important enough in American history to deserve escaping the oblivion that has engulfed his speech? So it seems worth while to devote a little space to him before continuing the narrative of the event in which he played a leading part even though the honors of the day went to another man.

Everett was born in Dorchester, Mass., April 11, 1794, a member of one of the leading families of New England. After several years of travel in Germany and England he returned to this country to occupy the chair of Greek literature at Harvard and to become the editor of the North American Review. One of the earliest examples of the "scholar in politics," Everett became successively congressman, governor of Massachusetts, minister plenipotentiary to England and, after a brief interim as president of Harvard, secretary of state in President Fillmore's cabinet.

But his chief claim to fame lies in his being a vigorous champion of American institutions when it was the fashion in Europe to sneer at our democracy, and an equally vigorous champion of honesty in public affairs and of social justice. He was a resolute opponent of white occupation of Indian lands without the consent of the red man. To him also was due the preservation of a sound currency in the panic of 1837 and the establishment of the first board of education in the United States. No mean record of accomplishment, this, and when there is added to them the fact that at the time he was the greatest orator in the country, it is easy to understand why those in charge of the dedication of the Gettysburg battlefield cemetery should have invited him to deliver the oration at the dedicatory ceremonies.

So important was Everett that when, in reply to the committee's invitation to be present on the date which they had set (October 23, 1863), he wrote that it would be impossible for him to be prepared in such a short time, the dedication, to suit his convenience, was postponed nearly a month, to November 19.

Perhaps it should be explained that at this time Gettysburg was not the national cemetery which it later became, even though the corporation which controlled it was called "The National Soldiers' Cemetery." This corporation had a board of trustees, made up of representatives appointed by the governors of northern states, 18 in number, from which had come the Union dead at Gettysburg. Although these trustees had general charge of laying out the cemetery, of the work of removal and reinterment of the bodies of the Union dead and of making the plans for imposing dedication ceremonies, the directing force in all of it was David Wills, a citizen of Gettysburg and the representative from Pennsylvania on the board of trustees.

After the date for the dedication ceremonies had been finally set, formal invitations to attend the ceremonies were sent to President Lincoln, to the members of his cabinet, of both houses of congress and of the diplomatic corps, to Generals Meade and Scott and to many other prominent citizens. "President Lincoln's invitation to be present was not a written individual request such as had been sent to Edward Everett and others," says Doctor Barton in his book, "Lincoln at Gettysburg." "It did not occur to any member of the commission that such a missive should be addressed to him. What was sent to him was a printed circular of which many hundreds were mailed and was in no respect different from that sent to the most obscure congressman from Minnesota or a consul from Patagonia. The sending of it to the President was a mere formality. When Mr. Wills informed his fellow officials of Mr. Lincoln's acceptance, that group was very greatly surprised, and they cannot be said to have been overjoyed."

The statement, made earlier in this article, that Lincoln was an "also-ran" at the Gettysburg dedication is based upon both verbal and written statements of the late Clark E. Carr, member of the board of trustees from Illinois. It was Carr who suggested to the other members of the committee that the President be invited to speak and we have his word for it that his suggestion was not received with any great enthusiasm by some of the other members. In his book, "Lincoln at Gettysburg," Carr says:

"The proposition to ask Mr. Lincoln to speak at the Gettysburg ceremonies was an afterthought. The President of the United States had, like the other distinguished personages, been invited to be present, but Mr. Lincoln was not, at that time, invited to speak. In fact, it did not seem to occur to any one that he could speak on such an occasion.

"Scarcely any member of the board, excepting the member representing Illinois, had ever heard him speak at all, and no other member had ever heard, or read from him, anything except political discussions. When the suggestion was made that he be invited to speak, while all expressed high appreciation of his great abilities as a political speaker, as shown in his debate with Stephen A. Douglas, and in his Cooper Institute address, the question was raised as to his ability to speak upon such a grave and solemn occasion as that of the memorial service. Besides, it was said that, with his important duties and responsibilities, he could not possibly have the leisure to prepare an address for such an occasion. In answer to this, it was urged that he himself, better than anyone else, could determine as to these questions, and that, if he were invited to speak, he was sure to do what, under the circumstances, would be right and proper.

"It was finally decided to ask President Lincoln 'after the oration' (that is to say, after Mr. Everett's oration) as Chief Executive of the nation, 'to set apart formally these grounds to their sacred use by a few appropriate remarks.' This was done in the name of the governors of the states, as was the case with others, by Mr. Wills; but the invitation was not settled upon and sent to Mr. Lincoln until the second of November, more than six weeks after Mr. Everett had been invited to speak, and but a little more than two weeks before the exercises were held."

So Abraham Lincoln, accepting this tardy invitation, went to Gettysburg to make his "few remarks" which the dubious members of the committee hoped, although they were not sure, would be "appropriate." Even Lincoln himself was probably a bit dubious about it for, as Doctor Barton says, "he was painfully aware that on the next morning he must make a speech from the same platform that was to be occupied by a scholarly and eloquent orator."

There was only one hotel in Gettysburg and it was so crowded that there was no room in it for the President of the United States. So he became a guest in the home of David Wills. In his room that night he made a first draft of the speech which he proposed to give and the next morning he made a few alterations and copied it over.

The next day he rode on horseback to the battleground, albeit on a horse which was too small, so that he was far from being an impressive figure. So, all in all, it would seem that the fates were bent upon making one of the greatest events in American history a veritable comedy of errors. And then when he did arrive at the cemetery it was discovered that Mr. Everett had not yet arrived. So the exercises began an hour late.

But eventually they were under way and at last the great moment for which the crowd had been waiting arrived. Edward Everett stood before them and the thrilling voice of a trained orator began: "Standing beneath this serene sky, overlooking these broad fields now reposing from the labors of the waning year, the mighty Alleghenies dimly towering before us, the graves of our brethren beneath our feet, it is with hesitation that I raise my poor voice to break the eloquent silence of God and Nature."

But there seemed to be no hesitation as the rich voice of the eloquent New Englander went on and on, breaking the "eloquent silence of God and Nature" for a matter of one hour and 57 minutes, at the end of which his listeners, if we are to believe the statements of some who were there, were somewhat wearied of the flow of oratory. There was a certain revival of interest when the President arose to speak.

"Four score and seven years ago"—the high-pitched voice shrilled out over the crowd and before his hearers could become accustomed to it, he "stopped just as they thought he was beginning. . . . After Everett's oration the President's speech seemed almost no speech at all. People were disappointed."

Everett, a great man himself, could recognize greatness in another. "I should be glad if I could flatter myself that I came as near to the central idea of the occasion in two hours as you did in two minutes," he said. But not even this tribute could cheer the Man of Sorrows. He went back to Washington depressed in mind as he was sick in body. For he thought he had failed. He did not know, and he could not know, any more than the hundreds who heard his words but failed to grasp their significance, that those "few appropriate remarks" of his would go ringing down the years to deathless glory.

PROBLEM OF LIQUOR CONTROL BY STATES

On the fifth of December conventions will meet in the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Utah to go through the formal motions of ratifying the Twenty-first Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in accordance with the will of the electorate. The Eighteenth Amendment, after fourteen years of the stormiest sort of history, will be as dead as the fugitive slave act.

Then the fireworks will begin, it is expected. Until January 3, at the earliest, liquor will be sold under the control of state laws alone, federal jurisdiction being limited to taxation and the protecting of states which vote dry—as yet there aren't any. States which want saloons can have them, it is claimed. So far Nevada is the only commonwealth which definitely regards the old brass rail with favor. In the great majority of the states, no definite plan has been decided upon, and the machinery of regulation is inept or lacking entirely, a matter which must be remedied by legislative session.

It was because of this that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., hired R. B. Fosdick, lawyer, and A. L. Scott, industrial engineer, to make a sweeping study of ways and means to control the liquor traffic. Their report, recently released, is long, thorough and dispassionate. The theme song of the report is that the greatest of all liquor problems is private profit, and that it should be eliminated. Each state should form an Alcohol Control Authority with retail outlets of its own—a la the system in vogue in the Canadian provinces—for hard liquor. It would fix prices, and all profits go to the state. Beer and wine could be sold in hotels, restaurants, grocery stores, etc., under regulation of the Authority. It would have the authority to establish dry zones within the state when local sentiment was favorable.

The licensing system—which has been persuasively suggested of late—is severely criticized, inasmuch as it still leaves the problem of profit, becomes involved with politics, tends to encourage, rather than discourage, over-drinking.

On the burning subject of liquor taxes, the report recommends that the tax rate should vary with a drink's alcoholic content, its price, and its "social value." The tax on beer would not be more than 10 cents a gallon; on such luxuries as sparkling wines, $3 a gallon; and on whiskey, $3 a gallon. Estimated tax revenue, on this basis, is $700,000,000 a year—almost twice the total Federal income tax returns for 1933.

Liquor manufacturers are showing themselves awake to conditions. In newspaper advertisements they are urging public co-operation and advocating temperance.

DAUGHTERS OF UTAH PIONEERS HAVE CAMP IN SAN FRANCISCO

A Camp of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers was organized on October 26 at the home of Mrs. Lila T. Edgar, of Hill street. Mrs. Millie Johnson acted as chairman, and Mrs. Edgar as recording secretary for the state.

The following officers were appointed: Mrs. Dorothy McAfee, Captain; Mrs. Irma Williams, First Assistant, and Miss Phobe Cherry, Second Assistant; Mrs. Deane White, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Sarah Felsch, Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer; Mrs. Oral Stowell, Chorister; Mrs. Mae Hobson, Organist; Mrs. Annie Lindsay, Historian and Chaplain.

Following the business meeting, Mrs. Edgar served delicious refreshments to the following: Mesdames Millie Johnson, Dorothy McAfee, Deane White, Irma Williams, Sarah Felsch, Annie Lindsay, Agnes Felsch, and Miss Phoebe Cherry. The first meeting of the new Camp will be held at the home of Mrs. Dorothy McAfee, on the evening of November 7, at 125 Cervantes boulevard, and a complete organization will be inaugurated.

MRS. ELIZABETH WITT DIES AS RESULT OF HER INJURIES

Mrs. Elizabeth Witt, wife of Albert Witt, proprietor of Witt & Sons Dairy in Colma, passed away in St. Luke's hospital last Wednesday morning about 4 o'clock. Death resulted from injuries and an operation in which both legs were amputated.

Mrs. Witt had a wide circle of friends, who with her family and relatives will mourn her tragic death.

She is survived by her husband, her sons, Albert, Charles and Walter, a daughter, Mrs. Annetta Heitman, and a sister, Mrs. Fred Volkman. Mrs. Witt was a native of Germany.

Funeral services will be conducted from Lasswell's mortuary chapel at 10:30 o'clock today, Friday, November 3. Interment will be at Cypress Lawn cemetery.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY ENJOYED BY THORNTON SCHOOL PUPILS

The annual Hallowe'en party for the boys and girls of the R. S. Thornton school, at Colma, was celebrated on Tuesday. The regular parade of the "horribles" gathered in the yard of the school at 12 o'clock noon. After the procession had wended its way through the play ground, the participants enjoyed sandwiches, cookies, fruit, "Buffalo" ice cream confection, candy and nuts. Hallowe'en games and stunts were played. The decorations were in Hallowe'en colors, with black cats, Jack-o-lanterns, witches, and everything necessary for a real Hallowe'en party.

Few country newpsaper publishers are worried over the government's threat to actually prosecute gold horders.

A sign on a California cabaret, where a popular impersonator was closing an engagement was prophetic. It read: "Last Night of Jean Malin." After finishing his farewell performance, Jean Malin accidentally backed his automobile off a pier into the sea and was killed.

U. S. MAY RECOGNIZE SOVIET GOVERNMENT

Long about the time this is read, probably, Maxim Litvinoff, soviet foreign affairs commissar, will walk up the steps of the White House, be ushered into one or another of its rooms, and sit down across the table from President Roosevelt. It will mark the first relations of any official nature between the United States and Russia since the double eagles of the Romanoffs crumbled to dust.

The upshot of the conference—which will bear principally upon trade relations—is expected to be United States recognition of the U. S. S. R., and an exchange of ambassadors. The Russian government is a tremendous buyer of machines and mill products—and it has been suggested suavely that the way for the United States to get a large share of the business is to become friendly.

Mr. Roosevelt will mention one subject, probably, that won't be very especially pleasant to Comrade Litvinoff. This will be the American claims that have been discussed for close to twenty years. They run to more than $500,000,000, and President Roosevelt will probably suggest that it's about time for something to be paid on account, at least.

Attitude of American business toward Soviet recognition has changed slowly but surely the last few years. Bulk of industries—especially the larger ones—feel that it is a wise step, and will mean much to this country's prosperity.

DECLARES RECOVERY PLANS SUCCEEDING

The President speaks—the country responds. We've been used to that lately, and it happened again in Mr. Roosevelt's optimistic radio talk of October 22. Gist of the speech was that the recovery plans are succeeding. The President reviewed progress made in employment under the N. R. A., the achievements in the field of price-upping and stabilization, the agricultural adjustment work, which has won fewer victories than was hoped. He spoke also on chiseling of the kind that raises the cost of a shirt $1 because of a 4 cent cotton processing tax—reiterated his opposition to it.

Most important of his utterances, perhaps, was his definite statement that there would be no effort at dollar stabilization now. Price stabilization is to come first—this, in his opinion, putting the horse and cart in the proper relation.

Next day's reaction to the speech was a boom in securities, strengthening of prices and markets of all kinds.

HERE AND THERE

Burglars who broke into a florist shop in Memphis, Tenn., left a yellow piece of paper on which was printed in bold letters in pencil: "Members of the N. R. A."

In celebration of his eightieth birthday, Loren Morrison, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, smoked his first cigarette and took his first airplane ride.

A thief who stole a large number of sample shoes from a West Side store in Chicago later threw them away because they were all "lefts."

A dozen set of false teeth and a bridge was the loot a window smasher took from a display case in front of the office of Dr. R. C. Krull recently in Flint, Mich.

The matrimonial venture of Orville Cherry, of Twin Falls, Idaho, struck the rocks when his wife refused to get up to fix his breakfast, and the real wreck came when she refused to wash the dishes.

Mrs. Emma Winton, of Duluth, 46 years old, is serving her one hundred and seventeenth jail sentence.

Anthony Cazzuro, of Brooklyn, was fined $5 for cutting off a bulldog's tail with a hatchet.

Joseph Sauer, of San Francisco, was sentenced to prison after admitting that he had robbed sixty churches of $100,000.

"It was on Monday night in the afternoon that this woman struck me," Mrs. Theresa Kohl, of Chicago, testified in an assault case.

Mrs. Eleanor Robinson, of Chicago, got a divorce because her husband beat her when she took snuff.

Zaidee Ragnoth, of Constantinople, has confessed setting a fire that destroyed 190 houses.

James Corlin, of St. Paul, testified in his divorce suit that he was "just a stowaway" in his own home, because his mother-in-law insisted on living there.

"Yes, I'm a confirmed spinster and proud of it," said Miss Agatha Robson, of Baltimore, on her one hundreth birthday.

When William Edwards, of London, arrived from France he had tied to his suspenders six pairs of hosiery he was trying to smuggle for his wife.

Auto Club Gives Rules For Highway Safety

Here are a few highway safety and common sense rules every motorist should try to follow, according to the National Automobile Club:

1. Have your car in perfect mechanical shape—particularly with regard to brakes, steering gear and headlights.
2. Give your undivided attention to your driving. In passing traffic, be sure there is a place for you in the traffic line ahead.
3. When other motor vehicles try to pass you—let them pass.
4. Stop and look at all railroad crossings.
5. When you come to a "Stop" sign—stop, not merely if you think a policeman is watching you.
6. Always signal before you slow down, stop or change your course.
7. Don't "loaf" when traffic is heavy.
8. Don't give strangers a lift. This may prove dangerous.
9. Never throw cigarette or cigar butts, pipe "heels" or matches out of the car until you are dead sure they are out.
10. Exercise courtesy and tolerance on the road and you will derive greater pleasure in motoring.

THE TEST OF FIRE PREVENTION

Fire Prevention Week is over. In every community in the land six days of intensive effort were given to educating the public in the fundamentals of curbing one of the greatest of all menaces to life, property and industrial opportunity. Civic organizations, fire departments, insurance representatives, public officials—all worked for the cause, and an appreciable share of the public listened.

The real test of the week, however, has just begun. The public listened—but will it remember? In past years the memory of most of us was notoriously and tragically short. During the week fire losses went down, and kept to a low level for a short period directly after. Then they rose again to the "normal" level.

Perhaps this week will have different results. Three years of depression have taught us the dangers of waste, of whatever kind. And waste due to fire is the most complete, and the most unnecessary possible. It benefits none. It harms all. It creates unemployment and is a barrier to civic development. It raises taxes and lowers incomes. It is the best friend of hard times.

The things we learned during the week are not difficult to remember. It takes little time and little money to put them into execution in most cases. There is no excuse for forgetting them. They mean money in our pockets, and safer, happier living.

The sponsors of the week, and those who worked for it, have done all they could. It's up to the rest of us now.

In the files of the Federal Bureau of Navigation are the records of 300,000 vessels, ranging from motor boats to transatlantic liners.

THOUSANDS ATTEND TANFORAN OPENING

Horse racing in California reached the dawn of a new era this week, when Tanforan opened its late fall meeting Wednesday under this state's new pari-mutuel system of wagering. The opening session, witnessed by thousands of spectators, was featured by the Inaugural Handicap.

Tanforan, where horse racing was pioneered to a return to public favor, presented a picturesque spectacle. All the buildings were decked in new attire, gaily trimmed for the occasion. Horses, such as have not run at Tanforan for many a day, are stabled at the track for the meeting. They come from all over the United States, and from "down under," whence came the great Phar Lap.

As much of the new pari-mutuel setup as could be installed in time for this meeting is ready at Tanforan. The wagering ring has been established with a totalizing board in the infield so that the approximate odds can be seen at all times, and where the final odds are displayed. It will be a simple matter of deduction for the player to determine what his favorite will pay him at the finish line. From the total figure is deducted the commission for the track and the state.

Auditors working under the supervision of the new California Racing Commission will supervise all tabulations.

The track has constructed a new receiving barn, where competing horses will be stabled an hour before the race in which they are to participate.

A new board of directors, headed by H. P. Russel, will supervise the Tanforan meeting. This board includes the following widely-known residents of San Mateo county: Thomas Fortune Ryan III, George Pope, Jr., Walter Hobart, Charles S. Howard, W. S. McCreery, J. O. Tobin, Lindsay C. Howard and John Rosekranz.

Ralph C. MacArthur, Burlingame, will be general manager, and C. J. Fitzgerald, of tthe Arlington Park track at Chicago, presiding steward. Assistant stewards will be Charles F. Henry and Floyd McKenny. J. B. Campbell will be presiding judge.

An attractive handicap, with some of the best horses of the track competing, will be offered tomorrow (Saturday). Post time is 2 P. M.

Sunday will be benefit day for the San Francisco community chest. A fine program will be presented.

King Gustav of Sweden is a good sport. Among the many letters received on his 75th birthday was one which read: "Darling, can you meet me this evening at our usual rendezvous?" Glacing at the envelope he saw that the letter was not intened for him, but for a sailor on the warship Gustav V. He wired the captain to grant the sailor leave for the evening.

A 1,200-mile pipe line is being constructed across the Syrian desert to carry oil from Irak to Mediterranean ports.

SAN FRANCISCO ELECTRIC RATES are among the lowest!

PACIFIC Gas and Electric Compauy has always kept its electric rates at the lowest possible point consistent with the best service possible.

Occasionally a system may be pointed out that charges lower rates. But always there is a reason. It is a system having some special advantage that makes a lower rate possible.

It may be exempt from taxes. We pay 14.5 cents in taxes out of every dollar we collect.

It may have a natural water fall close at hand, such as Niagara Falls, giving inexpensive hydro power. We have had to build our own water falls in the high mountains as far as 250 miles away, and the great transmission lines to bring the electricity to the market.

It may have only a thickly-populated metropolitan population to serve. We serve city and country alike.

But rates lower than ours are the exception, not the rule.

If we were exempt from taxes, our rates would be as low as any in the country. "Tax exemption," however, is merely a high-sounding phrase of political buncombe. Costs of government do not decrease. They must be met by taxes, and exempting the public from paying these taxes in one form means merely that it must pay them in another.

San Francisco's electric rates are 40 percent lower today than the rates of 1921. They have been reduced regularly, whenever a reduction could be made without handicapping service.

Prices of all other commodities are increasing.

Electricity unaffected by the prevailing upward price trend, remains the best bargain buy for the home.

GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A. CELEBRATES HALLOWE'EN

The General Pershing Parent-Teachers' Association gave a Hallowe'en party to the children of the General Pershing school last Tuesday night.

A large crowd of ghosts, goblins, witches and other Hallowe'en characters arrived at 7 o'clock. A grand march was enjoyed by all and there was a parade around the block.

Prizes were awarded to children picked by the judges. Buffalo ice cream was served, along with cookies and Hallowe'en candies. The school basement was decorated in Hallowe'en colors and had a fine array of paper novelties.

JUNIOR CATHOLIC DAUGHTERS ENJOY HALLOWE'EN PARTY

The Junior Catholic Daughters of America celebrated Hallowe'en at a costume party in the home of Mrs. Ann Sanbrailo, on Santa Cruz avenue, Daly City, on Monday evening, October 30. The oldfashioned carnival spirit held sway and all the traditional Hallowe'en stunts and games were played. The decorations and refreshments were in keeping with the spirit of the night, and the black cats, owls, witches, bats and Jack-o-lanterns were in evidence in all their spooky glory.

Entertainment was supplied by the members of the Juniors. Miss Elsie Musante sang, and Miss Virginia Baumsteiger, Dorothy Pieri and Elayne Wadiker did tap dancing. The music for the dancing was furnished by Dorothy Pieri. The counselors of the Junior Troop, Mrs. Anegla Johnson, Mrs. Ida Forest, Mrs. Catherine Core, Miss Ann Sanbrailo, and Mrs. Josephine T. Johnson, were present.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1933 NUMBER 15

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

The little boy with a toothache went to the dentist to have the tooth pulled. As soon as the operation was over he asked the dentist to let him have the tooth.

"What do you want the tooth for?" asked the dentist.

"I am going to take it home, fill it with sugar, and watch the darn thing ache."

"STERLING," the Wallboard of satisfaction.

An optimist is one who hopes to hear a radio comedian crack a new joke some day.

"Give an example of period furniture."

"Well, I should say an electric chair, because it ends a sentence."

"Goodness, gracious, Hiram," protested the farmer's wife, "what makes you say 'By Gosh,' and 'Jimminy, Gee' so much and go 'round with a straw in your mouth?"

"Well, those summer boarders are coming next week. If some of us don't talk and act that way, they'll think we aren't country folks at all."

SCORE CARDS for whist parties. Call at this office.

Club Expert: "Your trouble is that you don't address the ball properly."

Novice: "Well, I was polite to the darn thing as long as possible."

An Americanism: Having big parades for the relief of the unemployed.

A close man seldom has many close friends.

"Don't you think women ought to run the affairs of the country?"

"Certainly," replied Miss Cayenne," but I'm not quite sure they ought to come out in public and call attention to the fact that they are doing so."

Bass-Heuter High Grade Paint.

"Does your husband kick about the meals, my dear?"

"No," she smiled; "what he kicks about is having to get 'em."

It's a wise crack indeed that knows its own originator.
